CLIC is the working title for a new facility being built in the heart of Prospect, at 128 Prospect Road (on the former Civic Centre site), to service the needs of our growing community.

The new building will integrate with the heritage-listed Prospect Town Hall and create a “one-stop shop” for our community, bringing together the library, art gallery, digital hub, council administration and civic/community facilities.

Features of the CLIC
The CLIC features a modern, artistic and sustainable design, inspired by and responding to its setting and its role as a centre of community activity. The design includes:

- Lots of large windows allowing natural light, transparency and openness
- Indoor and outdoor spaces suitable for a range of community activities
- Areas that can be booked by local community members and businesses with after-hours access
- New technologies embedded throughout, including IT to support wireless high speed internet and multimedia capabilities
- Increased car parking availability (85 spaces compared with 62 in the former civic centre)
- A café and commercial tenancies
- Disability-friendly access and facilities
- Improvements and upgrades to the Prospect Town Hall.

Services available at the CLIC

Project Overview Fact Sheet

Project Cost and Timeframe
The total investment by Council on behalf of the community is $17.88m, which is part-funded through the sale of surplus land on Prospect Road and Main North Road. The CLIC is scheduled to open in September 2019.

Project Partners
Council engaged Adelaide-based architects JPE Design Studio for the design of the project, with local building firm Kennett Pty Ltd selected to construct the new facility and integrate the Town Hall. Project oversight is provided by project managers Jim Allen & Associates, working in collaboration with Council and the project team.

Project Background
The CLIC project is required as the current lease on the Thomas Street Centre (Prospect Library, Art Gallery, Digital Hub and Cottage) will end in late 2019, meaning that the services and facilities require a new home. Following consideration of a number of different sites and options, Council decided to build the new facility in a location where maximum community benefit would be achieved.

Community Involvement
Council undertook first phase community consultation from January–March 2016 with over 500 community members actively participating.

At the end of 2016, a Community Reference Group was established to be the “people’s voice”, assisting Council and the architects throughout the design process.

Council also set up a dedicated online engagement site, https://cityofprospect.engagementhub.com.au to enable the community to access all the documentation and participate in engagement opportunities.
